

Next Article »

Welcome to the iBlawg

by DLTR Editorial Staff

Dear Readers,

Welcome to the Duke Law & Technology Review iBlawg! After months of planning, we are pleased to commence the official launch of the iBlawg, our latest avenue for delivering cutting-edge legal commentary on developments in technology law.

As you will see in the coming months, the iBlawg will provide a wide-range of content from scholars, legal practitioners, and non-legal professionals addressing issues of technology and intellectual property law. Whether through a post created for the iBlawg, a response to a DLTR iBrief, or even commentary on an article published elsewhere, the iBlawg promises to extend the journal's broad reach to the ever-evolving blogosphere. We have already amassed a world-class list of "guest bloggers" including some of the top minds in both academia and the legal profession and can only imagine that the list of contributing minds will continue to grow. We are excited about the opportunity to bring legal scholarship into the Internet Age.

“ The iBlawg is intended to be a truly dynamic and interactive environment for legal commentary and analysis, so we invite our readers to comment upon and respond to iBlawgs as they see fit. ”

Finally, we would like to thank Scott Lenger, Nick Drury, Jennifer Carpenter, Wayne Miller, and Brett Cornwright for their hard work and guidance in the technological construction of the iBlawg. In addition, we would like thank our advisor, Professor James Boyle, for his continued suggestions, guidance and assistance in creating the iBlawg.

Categories

- eCommerce
- CyberCrime
- International
- Media & Communications
- Patents & Technology
- Health & Biotechnology
- Copyrights & Trademarks

Recent Posts

- The Federal Circuit and Administrative Law Principles
- Blocking Former Sex Offenders from Online Social Networks: Is this a Due Process Violation?
- Viacom v. Google: Whose Tube Is It Anyway?
- Blocking Former Sex Offenders from Online Social Networks: Is this a Violation of Free Speech?
- Upcoming Events at Duke Law

Subscribe

RSS 2.0

Blogroll

- Promote the Progress Berkeley Intellectual

Thank you for stopping by and we hope you will continue reading in the months ahead.

Sincerely,

The DLTR Editorial Board

Posted in eCommerce, CyberCrime, International, Media & Communications, Patents & Technology, Health & Biotechnology, Copyrights & Trademarks :: 1/25/06 :: Download Article \(.pdf\)

One Response to “Welcome to the iBlawg”

You can follow the responses to this entry through the RSS 2.0  feed. You can leave a response, or trackback from your own site.

wikipedia :: 12/31/06 at 9:23 pm

Wikipedia is the key to most success online, when it comes to collabritive content adding. I have spent many hours writing articles for Jimmy Wales and am very happy with this project. I am based in Seminole FL close to the wikipedia offices in St Petersburg. I love contributing!

Happy New Year Bloggers!

Property Weblog

Stanford Center for Internet and Society
Blogs

Slashdot

TTA Blog

Netlawblog

IP News Blog

Tech Dirt

Tech Law Advisor

The Trademark Blog

Patry Copyright Blog

Eric Goldman's Technology
& Law Blog

Wilson Sonsini's Silicon
Media Law Blog

Phosita

Lawrence Lessig's Blog

Berkman Center for Internet and Society
Blog

Patently O