

A NOTE FROM THE SPECIAL EDITOR

The loss of our colleague, Herbert Bernstein, led us to realize how his endearing combination of erudition, enthusiasm, and wit enriched our work and Duke Law School. To celebrate his contributions to our work and to legal scholarship more generally, we present this collection of essays and articles. The collection reflects the strong emphasis in Herbert's own work on carefully examining the differences and similarities among systems, institutions, and doctrines, as well as exploring connections among seemingly separate elements of the same system. The collection also demonstrates, through its breadth of subject matter, that Herbert's intellectual influence on his colleagues was wide-ranging.

For its generous funding of this volume, thanks are due to the Global Capital Markets Center, a joint venture of the law and business schools of Duke University. Thanks are also due to the student editors on the Duke Journal of Comparative and International Law, Duke Environmental Law and Policy Forum, Alaska Law Review, Duke Law Journal, and the Duke Law and Technology Review, all of which are published by the Duke Law School. (The mastheads of the journals appear at the back of this volume.) Finally, thanks are due to several other members of the law school community whose assistance made this volume possible, including Melanie Dunshee, Myriam Gross, David Menzies, Ralf Michaels, Theresa Newman, Jim Ruwaldt, Kelly Smith, Kristin Swaringen, Katherine Topulos, and Stephen Wallenstein.

– Deborah A. DeMott, David F. Cavers Professor of Law