The International Journal of Legal Information and the IALL: An Introduction to the Cumulative Index

RICHARD A. DANNER

The International Journal of Legal Information is the official publication of the International Association of Law Libraries (IALL). As noted in its current statement of purpose, the Journal "serves the global community of law librarians, legal scholars, and practitioners through the publication of original articles, conference papers, bibliographies, book reviews, and documents concerning law and law-related information." It is also a significant source of information about the history of the IALL and the major figures of international law librarianship who have participated in its programs and activities. Much of the history of the Association, which was established in 1959, is recorded within the Journal in presidential columns, editorials, memorials, and reports on meetings and conferences.

The Journal began publication in 1973 under the title International Journal of Law Libraries, which succeeded the International Association of Law Libraries Bulletin. The Bulletin was published in 30 numbered issues (some combined) between September 1960 and December 1972. The present title was adopted with volume 10 of the Journal in 1982. The IALL is listed

Thanks to Marie-Louise H. Bernal for her kind editing, and to Sarah Roberts for her large contributions to this project.

1The first issue of the Bulletin was designated volume 1, number 1; most subsequent issues beginning with the second were numbered with roman numerals, e.g., Number II. A two volume reprint edition of the Bulletin was published in 1975 by Verlag Dokumentation. In addition to reproducing the contents of the Bulletin, the first volume of the reprint includes a foreword with comments about the IALL and the Bulletin by Gerhard J. Dahlmanns, then-president of the IALL.

While the Bulletin’s publication schedule was somewhat irregular during its thirteen year history,² the Journal has generally been published with three issues in each annual volume. Six issues were published in volume 10 (1982). For volumes 11-15, although only three issues were published per volume, each issue was identified and numbered as a combined issue (e.g., vol. 13, Feb.-Mar. 1985, nos. 1-2). Volumes 25 and 26 (1997 and 1998) were published as single combined issues.³

Volumes 1 through the most recently completed volume of the Journal are available electronically through Hein Online (http://www.heinonline.org/). Articles from 1994 through the most recently published issue are available through Westlaw. Selected content (president’s messages, editorials, etc.) is published on the IALL web site (http://www.iall.org/).

The major figure in the history of the Journal is Ivan Sipkov of the United States Law Library of Congress. As the index of editors shows, Sipkov held numerous editorial positions with the Journal and the IALL Bulletin, including terms as general editor (with Jacob D. Korevaar and Wilhelmina M. Peletier) of the final two issues of the Bulletin in 1972; as general editor (with Klaus Menzinger) of the first two volumes of the Journal (1973-1974); and as editor-in-chief of volumes 13-19 (1985-1991). Upon his retirement as editor-in-chief in 1991, he served an additional year as senior editor. Other distinguished law librarians have served as primary editors or co-editors of the Journal: Klaus Menzinger was general editor (with Sipkov) of volumes 1-2 (1973-1974) and editor-in-chief of volumes 3-8 (1975-1980); Arno Liivak was editor-in-chief of volumes 9-12 (1982-1984); Igor I. Kavass and Bernard D. Reams were the editors of volumes 20-23 (1992-1995). With volume 24 (1996), Marie-Louise H. Bernal became editor of the Journal and continues in that capacity. Bartholemeus Landheer served as editor of the first 24 issues (1960-1979) of the Bulletin. Jacob D. Korevaar and Wilhelmina M. Peletier were the editors of issues XXV-XXVII (1971); Ivan Sipkov joined them for issues XXVIII-XXIX/XXX (1972).

In addition to substantive articles and bibliographies on subjects of interest to law librarians, reviews of new books on international and comparative law topics have been an important feature of the Journal since it began publication. Reviewers have included not only well-known members of the IALL, but prominent law librarians and law professors from throughout the world. The sheer number of reviews published in the Journal precludes including individual reviews in the coverage of the cumulative index; however, the occasional longer reviews identified by the editors by such titles as “Book Review Essays” are included in the index.

COVERAGE AND ORGANIZATION OF THE INDEX

The cumulative index provides comprehensive indexing of articles and other items published in the first thirty volumes of the International Journal of Law Libraries and the International Journal of Legal Information issued from 1973 through 2002. It also includes selective indexing of the IALL Bulletin, published from 1960-1972. The Bulletin featured articles of both length and substance, but also served as a source of news for the members of the Association, and included many shorter notices and other pieces as well. The current index focuses on Bulletin articles of five pages or more, president’s messages, reports on IALL meetings, and profiles and memorialis of IALL members. A more comprehensive index of the IALL Bulletin was published in volume XXIX/XXX (Dec. 1972), of the Bulletin, its final issue.

The index covers all articles published in the Journal, as well as editorial comments and presidential messages. The published locations of regular features such as International Documentation, Periodical Reviews, and the International Calendar are included, but individual items within the features are not indexed unless of article length. As noted above, the index does not cover individual book reviews. Author, title, and subject indexing are provided in a single alphabetical index:

Authors’ names are in regular roman type (e.g., Lansky, Ralph);
Article titles are in italics (e.g., Law Libraries in Germany: An Introduction); and Subject headings are in boldface (e.g., Law Libraries - Germany).

Locations of articles in the International Journal of Law Libraries and the International Journal of Legal Information are in the format: 19:179-193, in which the article’s volume is listed in boldface and inclusive pagination follows the colon. Locations of articles in the IALL Bulletin are in the format: VIII (Bull.):7-15, in which the article’s issue number is in boldface roman numerals, the abbreviation (Bull.) is used to identify the Bulletin, and inclusive pagination follows the colon.
