

Editors' Note

This issue marks the 60th year of publication for Law and Contemporary Problems. Founded in 1933 by Professor David F. Cavers, L&CP was designed to approach society's problems on an interdisciplinary basis. It was the first U.S. Law Review to exclusively employ the symposium format. Today, L&CP is read and cited around the world as the result of talented and dedicated leadership, both faculty and student. A particular debt is owed to L&CP's General Editors:

David F. Cavers (1933-45)
Brainerd Currie (1946-49)
Robert Kramer (1949-55)
Melvin G. Shimm (1956-61, 1975-76)
Hans W. Baade (1962-65)
Clark C. Havighurst (1965-69)
John C. Weistart (1970-72)
Alvin C. Warren, Jr. (1973-74)
David C. Lange (1976-81)
Paul D. Carrington (1981-83)
Joyce S. Rutledge (1983-90)
Theresa A. Newman Glover (1990-)

The student editors who have served with the current General Editor thank her for sharing her knowledge and her patience. Under Theresa Glover's leadership, we are confident that L&CP is positioned to publish quality scholarship for another 60 years.
