This volume consists of reprints of case abstracts of important Supreme Court decisions in the criminal law area handed down during the first eight terms of the 1960's which appeared originally in the CRIMINAL LAW REPORTER.

The seven chapters of this work outline the major characteristics of the historically most important legal systems—Roman, Jewish, Islamic, Hindu, Chinese, African, and English. Emphasis is placed on each system's capacity for growth and change in reaction to social conditions.

Fifteen authors contributed articles to this volume which is devoted to discussion of those areas in American society where change has created new kinds of legal problems. Subjects range from the effect of social science on law to the pros and cons of "specialization" in the legal profession.

This volume initially explores the relevance of psychoanalytic theory to a wide variety of legal issues and concludes with a presentation of the role of psychiatry in particular legal processes.
